But these apps are reasonable in cost and can provide some great information My favorite, the BlueDriver, includes all sorts of diagnostic advice along with giving you just the code that it's reading.. These days, you can read your own OBD codes using a simple smartphone app! There is an initial investment, as the app is shipped with a Bluetooth enabled device that plugs into your car's information data port where it sucks the codes from the vehicles computer and transmits them to your phone.
